The Holiday Gift That Keeps on Giving

As the holiday season approaches, please keep our needs list in mind if you’re looking for an alternative to traditional gift-giving. Making a gift of items from the needs list, or donating the financial resources to purchase those items, is a wonderful way to honor someone special in your life. We’ll be happy to send a card acknowledging your gift.

NEEDS LIST Your contributions have a direct impact for victims of domestic and sexual violence.

A donation of items from the needs list throughout the year helps Blackburn Center sustain the shelter program, and helps to maintain the support groups the agency provides for women and children. In addition, some of these items are made available to women – and their children – who are establishing their own homes and need support with basic household items.

Please put the items that are in bold italics at the top of your shopping list, and help Blackburn Center manage donations by bringing new items. If you have used items to donate, the agency can provide a list of thrift shops in the area that make items available to Blackburn Center shelter residents at no cost to them.

Fitness club shooting symbolizes culture of violence against women

It’s tempting to label the murder of three women and the wounding of nine others at the LA Fitness center in Collier Township as the isolated, tragic actions of one disturbed man. How else can we make sense of the misdeeds of George Sodini—a mass murderer who targeted his victims based not only on their gender, but also on his belief that all women must pay for his past failed relationships?

This horrific crime demands an acknowledgment of the role that violence against women plays in not only the fitness club shootings, but in other crimes. After all, Mr. Sodini didn’t just go into a health club and randomly shoot members before killing himself; he pre-selected an August 4th class he knew to be all women. Consider these incidents in the last three years alone:

- Robert Stewart opened fire at the Pinelake Health and Rehabilitation Center in March 2009 in Carthage, North Carolina, killing eight people and wounding three. His estranged wife, a nurse at the center, was the alleged target of the shooting.
- Bruce Jeffrey Pardo killed nine people, including his ex-wife and her parents, at a Christmas party last year at his former in-laws’ home in Covina, California.
- Charles Carl Roberts IV fatally shot five girls in an Amish one-room schoolhouse in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania in October 2006. He had separated the female students from the male students before the shooting.
- Duane Roger Morrison held six female students hostage and sexually assaulted them at Platte Canyon High School in Bailey, Colorado in September 2006 before he killed one of the students.

Beyond these crimes that receive widespread media attention, there are countless acts of violence that rarely make the news. Last year alone, Blackburn Center Against Domestic & Sexual Violence in Westmoreland County, provided services to 2,833 victims of domestic and sexual violence and answered 3,466 calls on its hotline. This region is a snapshot of the nation: one in every four women in the United States will experience domestic violence in her lifetime; one in five women has experienced an attempted or completed rape. Being female is the number one risk factor for being sexually assaulted or assaulted by an intimate partner.

To end these kinds of incidents in our communities, we must address the marginalization and objectification of women that ultimately results in traumatic injury, loss of life and loss of community. Violence against women ranges from demeaning images of women and girls in the media to violence in relationships to the extreme of a mass murderer who targets his intended victims based on their gender, his belief in entitlement to a relationship and the right to make all women pay for his rejection.

Gender biases and inequities are complex and deeply rooted in our culture. When society permits the marginalization of women and does not address its consequences, women will continue to be demeaned and targeted. The change needed to end this violence requires both personal and systemic transformation that challenges the existing status quo.

Historically, society has viewed violence against women as something women have the responsibility to control. Without a fundamental shift in cultural norms, women who are victims of domestic and sexual violence will continue to be held accountable for someone else’s behavior. Until we stop asking “Why did she stay?” or “Why was she out alone at night?” and until society instead shines the spotlight on the behavior of perpetrators and declares violence against women unacceptable, incidents like the LA Fitness shooting will continue.

Along with providing victim services, Blackburn Center works to transform current thinking and practices that result in the inequity and oppression of women in our communities. Advocates for this kind of change know that this work involves some risk—challenging the status quo can result in discomfort and loss of support. But it is time to take this risk and this step. Without it, there will never be enough battered women’s shelters or rape crisis counselors, and the tragedies will continue.

Further investigation may find a number of critical junctures where the system failed to help Mr. Sodini and to protect the public. However, it would compound this tragedy to avoid the uncomfortable but necessary discussion of violence against women; the toll it takes on individuals, families and communities; and the responsibility and accountability that we all share to put an end to it.

This article, submitted by Blackburn Center, first appeared in the August 24, 2009 edition of the Pittsburgh Post Gazette, on the Perspectives page.

CHALLENGE THE POWER. DEMAND CHANGE.

Domestic and sexual violence are rooted in an imbalance of power between men and women. Our society accepts violence against women as normal and inevitable. For Blackburn Center to fulfill its mission to end domestic and sexual violence, we must challenge this imbalance of power that supports the oppression of women.
